Clinics and conferences with nurse in attendance, as follows:

June 4, 1931. Child Health Conference at Town hall, Springfield. Twenty-three pre-school children given physical examinations by Dr. F. V. V. Wethey of Enfield, Mrs. Lois Barton, County Nurse.

January 25, 1932. Eye Clinic. Fifty-three school children examined. Dr. W. F. Mansfield of Newport was examining Optometrist.

May and June, 1932. Diphtheria Toxoid Clinics at school house. Twenty-five school children and nine pre-school children received inoculations. Dr. John Munro of Sunapee gave the treatment. Mrs. Lois Barton, County Nurse.

June 10, 1932. Dental Clinic held at Town hall, Springfield. Thirteen school children, two pre-school, and six adults had work done. Dr. Irving Crandall of Claremont was the dentist.

Am very happy to report that nearly every school child and most of those who will enter school within the next few years have been immunized for diphtheria, made possible for us by the efforts of Mrs. Mary Davis, our State Director.

The attendance of school children and pre-school children at the dental clinic gave me great pleasure as it is these children to whom we look to pass on health education to the future generation.

The children are especially fortunate in having Mr. H. H. Pratt as superintendent, and the present teaching staff, as they are not only interested in the knowledge they impart, but are also interested in the health of each child individually. Their cooperation at all times has been very much appreciated.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

To the Members of the School Board, Springfield, N. H.:

Our schools in Springfield are in excellent condition and under excellent teaching. I am more and more convinced with increasing experience among schools that the teachers make the school. Of course, text books, maps, and other accessories are needed, but they are of small use under the management of incompetent teachers. A teacher is more than a worker, she is more than an instructor or a manager—she is an influence and a personality. She teaches more by what she is than what she can say. In Springfield today every teacher is a potent influence for good. I deplore the attitude of the teacher who feels that instruction and discipline is the major part of her work. She has to be a teacher and a strong personality not only while she is in her school room but at all hours of the day. Pupils learn to respect or to despise their teachers more by their bearing and their acts outside of school hours than they do inside the school room. We are all gratified by the especially fine attitude of our teachers, by the way they are leading the children in school, by the kind of women they are, and by the work they are doing.

All this explains why those of us who deal with schools and children feel that the kind of women we want in charge of our children are worthy of the highest financial reward we can afford to give them.

Miss Edna D. Hazen and Miss Yvonne Martin are again at the Center School this year; Mrs. Marion A. Heath at Maxfield, and Miss Elsie Smith at Morgan. The fine work of the first three teachers is already well known. Miss Smith is a new graduate from Plymouth Normal School. She is doing a quality of work worthy of a mature teacher. She is continuing the fine work of Mrs. Collins, who taught here last year and adding to it by her own good personality. We have, as a whole, now going on in our schools, the best work I have seen in them.

Regarding the further maintenance of two teachers at the Center Division school I may say here that it is my recommendation to continue the same plan another year. Begun as an experiment the plan has brought results in education and training better than was expected. If the district can afford the money, the results in pupil training are worth more than the expense, and I should be unwilling to see the plan dropped except as a last resort retrenchment necessity. I believe this is a peculiarly progressive plan, operated in very few, if any, rural schools in this state. No teacher can be an equally good instructor in eighth grade subjects and in primary ones. Neither can she give the time necessary to start beginners and to prepare students for high school, to say nothing of all the grades in between under our present system of graded groups. Very many teachers do it, but the results are not ideal and we have to put up with much inferior work in one grade or the other. We have here what may be called almost an ideal division of work.

The enrollment of the schools at the present time is given in the table below:

School	I	II	III	IV	V	VI	VII	VIII	IX
Center	3	3	3	8	0	4	1	3
Maxfield	2	2	1	2	3	0	1	1	2
Morgan	0	0	2	1	0	3	1	3
Totals	5	5	6	11	3	7	3	7	2

Total number enrolled——49

Of this number three are resident in Grafton. An additional pupil, residing in Springfield, attends school in New London.

There are eleven pupils from Springfield attending high schools in Newport, Lebanon, Enfield, Sunapee and Kimball Union Academy. Figured in per cents the proportion which the part of our school bears to the total number of pupils resident in the district gives the following figures: In Enfield about 20% of all resident pupils are enrolled in high school; in Canaan about 20%; in Springfield about 18%; in Grafton about 16%; and in Orange about 6%.

All graduates from last year's eighth grade entered high school except two at Maxfield school who came back there for a further year before entering high school. This is nearly a one hundred per cent record for our graduates taking further advanced study.

Of course, more pupils in high school costs the district more, but no district should begrudge every one of its children the privilege of a high school course.

The median cost per pupil for all high schools in the state for last year was $118.51 while the highest tuition charge paid by Springfield is $85.00 in a public high school. It is cheaper for the district to buy high school education than it is to manufacture it for itself.

The item of text books and supplies in the school budgets often attracts attention, sometimes out of all proportion to its amount, because it often seems to people who are not informed about the actual needs of schools that more or less of these supplies are wasted and "waste" is a word not favored among thrifty New Englanders.

It might be interesting to know that during the year ending June 30, 1931, figures for all over the state show that districts spent for school supplies all the way from $5.17 per pupil to $.09; and for text books from $9.10 to $.16 per pupil. This is the latest tabulation available. Springfield expended during that year $1.50 per pupil for text books, and $1.90 for scholars' supplies.

Out of 243 school districts in the state Springfield stood 128th in its per pupil expenditure for text books and 73rd in expenditures for scholars' supplies, which looks like reasonably liberal provision and at the same time frugal management.

In conclusion let me express my continued appreciation of your kindly criticism and help as a school board and for all the kindly thoughts which your citizens have felt and expressed for my work in your schools. I have already expressed my opinion of the cooperation and work of your teachers.

Very sincerely yours,

H. H. PRATT
Superintendent of Schools
